

Mental Health Integration for Chaplain Services (MHICS) training program

Description and Course Overviews

Mental Health Integration for Chaplain Services (MHICS) is an intensive sub-specialty training that aims to better equip chaplains in the provision of care to Veterans and Service members with emotional and psychosocial challenges. This innovative training tailored to the contexts of VA and DoD chaplains uses formational, interactive, and applied methods to cultivate knowledge and skills in evidence-based psychosocial and integrative approaches to spiritual and pastoral care. Our aim is to further develop professional chaplaincy through the application of new and relevant skills within the contexts chaplains serve, whether clinical, training, or operational. Faculty and presenters include top experts from the Department of Veterans Affairs, the Department of Defense, and academic settings.

The MHICS training program spans three academic semesters, each consisting of a course and participation in practicum small-group consultation calls. Each course requires completing distance modules, a written paper, and attending a multi-day training intensive. Each distance module is comprised of three 50-60-minute video didactics, readings, and interactive online assignments, requiring an estimated time of 8-12 hours each to complete. There is substantial flexibility in choosing when to complete the distance modules within guidelines provided to maximize small-group engagement.

Consultation calls focus on application of material through case examples. Regularly scheduled 90-minute small-group consultation calls using video conferencing occur during the second week of each distance module. All participants present actual (de-identified) cases during their small-group calls as part of learning how to integrate principles from different evidence-based modalities into their chaplain care – in particular, Acceptance and Commitment Training (ACT), Problem-Solving Training (PST), and Motivational Interviewing (MI) – and to enhance collaboration with interdisciplinary colleagues.

An overview of the MHICS training program is provided below (course content is subject to recurring change and improvement).

VA chaplains admitted to MHICS subsequently have the option of applying to Vanderbilt Divinity School (VDS) to pursue a Doctor of Ministry (D.Min.) in Integrative Chaplaincy and earn academic credit while completing MHICS. See divinity.vanderbilt.edu/dmin for more information and the final page of this overview for a comparison of the MHICS and D.Min. options. Timelines for the three MHICS courses are structured to coincide with VDS' academic terms.

First Course: Innovations in Care for Mental Health and Chaplaincy

The first course involves an on-campus kickoff training intensive that introduces chaplains to the MHICS training program, followed by six distance modules. They then consider and explore integration of principles from three evidence-based practices (EBPs)--Acceptance and Commitment Training (ACT), Motivational Interviewing (MI), and Problem-Solving Training (PST)--into their chaplaincy care. Consultation calls focus on integrating course materials and collaboration with interdisciplinary colleagues.

Comparison of MHICS and Doctor of Ministry in Integrative Chaplaincy

The MHICS training program occurs over the course of three academic semesters. Chaplains admitted to MHICS may apply to Vanderbilt Divinity School to pursue a Doctor of Ministry (D.Min.) in Integrative Chaplaincy, with their work as part of MHICS going toward academic credit for the D.Min. The D.Min. entails a total of 36 credit hours, 24 of which can be earned while completing MHICS. In addition to completing all of the same work as the students only pursuing MHICS, D.Min. students complete extra readings, assignments (e.g., quizzes, exams), and practicum work (e.g., case write-ups, 90-minute peer calls on alternating weeks) – with all work contributing to letter grades (as opposed to the pass/fail work for MHICS only) submitted to the VDS Office of the Registrar at the end of each semester and contributing to a cumulative GPA. D.Min. students also attend one extra day as part of each of the three MHICS training intensives (i.e., 4 days instead of 3 days). Both D.Min. and MHICS students receive a MHICS completion certificate upon satisfactory completion of the three semesters of coursework. Students who begin only pursuing MHICS cannot later decide to pursue the D.Min. in Integrative Chaplaincy – they must apply and be accepted to the D.Min. through Vanderbilt Divinity School before the training begins. The table below compares the MHICS and D.Min. options.
