Focus on the VISN
Leadership Activities

VA Public Affairs recently filmed an interview with Mr. Hoffman (Network Director), Dr. Robin Hurley (MIRECC Associate Director, Education) and Dr. Edward Abraham (Dean, Wake Forest School of Medicine) that will be used in updating VHA video on VHA-university partnerships. The focus of the interview was the strengthening affiliation between the medical school and Salisbury VA and how this improves clinical care for Veterans and enhances both education and research.

Bridging Mental Health and Chaplaincy

www.mirecc.va.gov/mentalhealthandchaplaincy

Three videos are now available on the website of the Mental Health and Chaplaincy program that provide introductory education on the rationale and basic considerations for integrating mental health and chaplain services. The target audience is chaplains and mental health providers (both VA and non VA). In addition, all others who are interested are encouraged to view the videos. Up to 3 Continuing Education Credits (ACCME, APA, and ASWB) can be earned.

Video #1 addresses the need to consider including spiritual care providers as part of the treatment team in an effort to provide holistic, patient-centered care. This video covers the rationale for integrating mental health and chaplain services, research findings in the domain of religion, spirituality, and health, and cautionary considerations in interpreting and applying research findings.

Video #2 features an in-depth examination of the similarities between the disciplines of psychology and chaplaincy in terms of their use of, and emphasis on, narrative. It explores the concept of narrative and narrative medicine, the way in which various disciplines can use narrative to improve patient care, and highlights potential benefits of including chaplains on treatment teams, given their unique perspectives on narrative.

Video #3 focuses on the research that has been conducted at VA and DOD sites regarding chaplaincy as it relates to mental health care, as well as the roles and duties of VA and DOD chaplains, and the strides that the mental health field has made in the inclusion of spirituality as a component of holistic health care. Research findings from the Integrated Mental Health Strategy report on chaplains’ roles in the VA and DOD are discussed, as well as an in-depth exploration of what chaplains do and what they can offer mental health care, and ways in which the mental health field is bridging towards spirituality.

In the News! Excerpts from “Dallas VA conference discusses clergy’s role in suicide prevention” by Jasmine Aguilera

.....since 2008, the VA and the U.S. Department of Defense have been exploring ways to incorporate spiritual guidance into service members’ mental health care..... About 59 percent of chaplains in the VA system and 79 percent in the active-duty military said they perceive that veterans and service members commonly seek help from clergy instead of a mental health care provider....

.....With clergy, veterans often reveal very personal information about their relationships, family and work, said Bill Cantrell, associate director of chaplaincy for the Mental Health and Chaplaincy program. That is information that the patient may not feel comfortable revealing to anyone else, he said, speaking at a recent suicide prevention conference in Dallas.

In 2010, the VA and the Pentagon launched an official strategy that included establishing collaborations between mental health care and chaplaincy at seven VA centers across the U.S.....Cantrell, who is also a Navy chaplain at the Mid-Atlantic Mental Illness Research, Education and Clinical Center in North Carolina, said suicide rates among veterans and service members are increasing and this strategy could save lives.
